The students collected demographic characteristics, identified the environmental risk factors, carried out personal hygiene and diet survey for the family members of the allotted house using the format. The students also identified the family members suffering from acute and chronic medical problems. Medical camp was organized in the village to treat the acute medical condition. To ensure early clinical exposure, the students were asked to accompany the family members with medical problems to the medical camp and to observe the management by the treating doctor. Feedback in the form of open-ended questions were obtained from the students on the final day. Pre and post-test evaluation (MCQ question) was also done on the beginning and at the last day of the program.
